

Clinical Dialogue Transcript — ADHD

Therapist Model:	klyang/MentaLLaMA-chat-7B
Patient Model:	llama-3.1-8b-instant
Condition / DSM-5:	ADHD
Session ID:	001caad3-d4a4-4fdc-8508-58e399f69107
Date / Time:	2026-07-19 10:13:30
Total Dialogue Turns:	21

THERAPIST (Turn 1)

Hi, thanks for coming in today. What's been going on for you lately?

PATIENT (Turn 2)

It's just... stuff, I guess. I mean, work's been okay, I've been trying to get some projects done, but... pauses, looks around the room Oh, I just remembered I need to pick up milk on my way home. I always forget to do that.

THERAPIST (Turn 3)

smiling That's okay, we all forget things sometimes. What else is on your mind?

PATIENT (Turn 4)

shrugs Not much, just the usual. I'm just bad at adulting, you know? I'll start something, and then I'll get distracted and forget about it. Like, I was trying to clean out my closet the other day, but then I saw a bird outside the window and... trails off, looks out the window nodding I see. It can be hard to stay focused on one task, especially when there are distractions around. Do you want to talk about anything else?

THERAPIST (Turn 5)

PATIENT (Turn 6)

hesitates, looks down I don't know... it's just hard to keep track of everything sometimes. I'll write down reminders, but then I'll lose the paper or forget to check my phone. And then I'll feel really guilty about it because I know I should be more organized... pauses, looks up Did I mention I'm supposed to meet a friend for lunch today? I hope I don't forget...

THERAPIST (Turn 7)

smiling Don't worry, you'll remember. It's normal to forget sometimes. Do you want to talk about anything else?

PATIENT (Turn 8)

sighs I don't know... it's just frustrating, you know? I feel like I'm always starting over, like I'm not getting anywhere. And people always tell me I'm just being lazy or careless, but it's not that I'm not trying... trails off, looks away nodding I understand. It can be frustrating when we feel like we're not making progress or feeling like we're not good enough. Do you want to talk about anything else?

THERAPIST (Turn 9)

PATIENT (Turn 10)

shrugs I don't know... I guess I just feel really overwhelmed sometimes. Like, my brain is just racing and I can't focus on anything. And then I get anxious because I know I'm not getting things done, but I don't know how to stop it... pauses, looks down Oh, wait, I just remembered I need to call my mom back. She's been calling me for days...

THERAPIST (Turn 11)

smiling Don't worry, you'll remember to call her back. It's normal to feel overwhelmed and have racing thoughts sometimes. Do you want to talk about anything else?

PATIENT (Turn 12)

looks up, slightly frustrated I don't know... it feels like you're not really hearing me. I'm not just "overwhelmed" or "having racing thoughts". It's... it's just how my brain is, you know? I've always been like this. pauses, looks away

THERAPIST (Turn 13)

nodding I understand. It can be difficult to explain or fully understand how our brains work, especially when we feel like we're different from others. Do you want to talk about anything else?

PATIENT (Turn 14)

shrugs I don't know... I guess I just feel like I'm always struggling, like I'm constantly playing catch-up. And it's not just school or work, it's everything. I'll try to plan a weekend trip, and then I'll forget to pack something or show up late... trails off, looks down nodding I see. It can be frustrating when we feel like we're always making mistakes or falling short. Do you want to talk about anything else?

THERAPIST (Turn 15)

PATIENT (Turn 16)

looks up, slightly irritated Yeah, I want to talk about something else. Can we talk about what it's like to be in school? Like, how I was always getting in trouble for not paying attention or not finishing my homework. My teachers would always say I had potential, but I just couldn't seem to focus... leans forward, eyes lighting up Oh, I had this one teacher in high school, Mrs. Johnson, she was always on my case about my grades...

THERAPIST (Turn 17)

smiling I see. It sounds like you had a challenging experience with school and focus. Do you want to talk about anything else?

PATIENT (Turn 18)

nods slowly Yeah, I guess so. It's just... it feels like I've always been struggling with this stuff, even when I was a kid. Like, my parents would tell me to focus, to pay attention, and I just couldn't... pauses, looks down I remember one time, I was in elementary school, and my mom made me a special chart to help me stay organized. But I just ended up losing the chart, and... trails off, looks up Never mind.

THERAPIST (Turn 19)

nodding I understand. It can be difficult to stay focused and organized, especially when there are external factors contributing to the struggle. Do you want to talk about anything else?

PATIENT (Turn 20)

looks down, a hint of shame in my voice Yeah, I guess I do. It's just... sometimes I feel like I'm not even trying hard enough, you know? Like, I'm just being lazy or something. And it's hard to shake that feeling, even when I know it's not true... pauses, looks up Do you think it's possible that someone like me could ever... you know, get it together?

THERAPIST (Turn 21)

smiling I think it's possible for anyone to improve their focus and organization skills. It may take time and effort, but it is definitely possible. Do you want to talk about anything else?